BEATEN TWICE BY BOSTON

The Indianapolis Players Fall Easy Victims to the Skillful Bostonians,

Losing Both Games Yesterday-Results of Other League and Association Games-Racing Over Latonia and St. Louis Tracks.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal-Boston, May 30 .- Clarkson's science and Madden's good luck, assisted by fine fielding, caused the Bostons to add two games to their list of victories, to-day, at the expense of the Hoosiers. Clarkson pitched a great game all the time, but particularly when there were men on bases. In the first inning two hits were made and two men on bases, with no hands out. He pitched a succession of curves over the plate which the Hoomer batters could not hit In the fourth, Indianapolis got a runner on third, and in the last two innings men were on bases, but the batters were fooled by Clarkson, and as a result Indianapolis was shut out. Healy pitched well, striking the home club out in fine order, being ably nesisted by fine fielding. In the seventh inning, with Morrill on second. Brown hit a tremendous fly to right field, which soared over the field like a cannon-ball. It was good for a home run, almost, when McGeachy made a flying grab at it, never hoping to stop the flyer, and into paw it popped. It was great catch, and for several minutes the crowd vociferously applauded him, renewing it when he came to bat in the eighth mning. In the eighth Johnson made a two-bagger, getting third on a wild pitch, and scored by Daily throwing the ball to second when there was no one there to catch it. In the ninth Morrill scored by getting a base on balls, aided by the fly of Hornung and two sacrifices-Hornung fellowing on the fly of Clarkson. Score:

The two Mikes were the battery in the aftermoon game-Kelly and Madden. The former performed wonders, considering his condition, as during the game, he wore a large flannel muffler. He was uproariously received, and his only error was muffing a foul fly which did not affect the game. Madden made but poor speed; still the visitors did not bit him hard. Wise opened the game by going out to Esterbrook, who made a great stop, which was loudly Johnston and Kelly repeated the same. In the second Morrill made a threebagger by the ball getting in the crowd in left field, and then scored on a wild throw of Boyle. followed suit. In the fifth collided with Esterbrook; the atter was burt, but kept on playing. Madden cored by a lucky bound of the ball over the third baseman's head. In the eighth Johnston scored on a three-bagger and a fly. For the vis-stors, Boyle knocked the ball over the left-field fence for a home run, and was cheered for five minutes. In the ninth, Denny made a twobagger, stole third, and scored on a miserable throw of Wise's. Score:

CHICAGO TWICE BEATEN. Washington, May 30 .- The Washingtons defeated the Chicagos for the second time to-day in a game which was well played throughout on the part of the home team, and at times by the visitors. There were about 3,000 people present. and not a few of them anticipated defeat for the home club when they learned that Daily would pitch. He disappointed every one by pitching a splendid game, and except in the ninth inning his curves were altogether too effective for the Chicagos. Krock also pitched well, but the Washingtons bunched their hits in the third inning, which, together with a base on balls, gave them three earned runs. Pffefer and Anson made damaging errors, the one by the latter giving the home club a run. Myers, Burns, Shock and Hoy played finely. Score:

who, to the surprise of everyone, out-played the League leaders at all points and won the game with great ease. The weather was cloudy, and when the game commenced a slight, drizzling rain prevailed. Not more than 1,000 were present. O'Day pitched a great game, and was, on the whole, well supported. Baldwin could not deceive the Washingtons, and they batted the ball hard and just when it was needed.

Attaches of the various city banks are seriously afflicted with the base-ball fever. It has been growing on them ever since the League season opened, but it did not reach the danger limit until a few days ago, when it culminated in a challenge from Fletcher's Bank to play on Decoration day. The Indiana National was the one selected as the victim, and the two nines mmediately went into training. The game was played yesterday afternoon on the steek-yard grounds in the presence of numerous friends of the contestants and resulted in a victory for the Indiana gentlemen by a score of 18 to 17. The playing throughout was close and exciting, the winning run being made in the ninth inning, with two men left on bases and Home-run Porter at the bat. The Meridian National helped out the challengers by lending them some of their best players, but even with these odds in their favor they were defeated.

Sheridan's Ride. Up from the South at break of day. Bringing to Winchester fresh dismay, The affrighted air with a shudder bore, Like a herald in haste, to the chieftain's door The terrible grumble, and rumble, and roar, Telling the battle was on once more, And Speridan twenty miles away.

And wider still those billows of war Thundered along the horizon's bar, And londer yet into Winchester rolled The roar of that red sea uncontrolled, Making the blood of the listener cold As he thought of the stake in that fiery fray, And Sheridan twenty miles away.

But there is a road from Winchester town, A good, broad highway leading down; And there through the flush of the morning light, A steed, as black as the steeds of night, Was seen to pass as with eagle flight— As if he knew the terrible need, He stretched away with his utmost speed; Hills rose and fell, but his heart was gay, With Sherigan fifteen miles away.

itill sprung from those swift hoofs, thundering south Or the tail of a comet, sweeping faster and faster, Foreboding to traitors the doom of disaster; The heart of the steed and the heart of the master Were beating like prisoners assaulting their walls, Impatient to be where the battle-field calls; Every nerve of the charger was strained to full play, With Sheridan only ten miles away.

Under his spurring feet the road Like an arrowy Alpine river flowed, And the landscape sped away behind Like an ocean flying before the wind; And the steed, like a bark fed with furnace ire, Swept on, with his wild eyes full of fire; But lol he is nearing his heart's desire— He is snuffing the smoke of the roaring fray, With Sheridan only five miles away.

The sight of the master compelled it to pause.
With foam and with dust the black charger was gray;
By the flash of his eye and the red nostrils' play He seemed to the whole great army to say: "I have brought you Sheridan all the way From Winchester town to save the day."

Hurrah, hurrah for Sheridan! Hurrah, hurrah for horse and man! And when their statues are placed on high, Under the dome of the Union sky. The American soldier's temple of fame, There with the glorious General's name, Be it said in letters both bold and bright: By carrying Sheridan into the fight, From Winchester—twenty miles away.

-Thomas Buchanan Read. Chicago's Way of Doing Things.

The Dayton Journal is authority for the statement that "the editor of the Chicago Inter Ocean has paid $50 for five tickets, for his family "to the forthcoming Republican national convention. The funniest thing about it is that the Journal makes the statement with apprente blacidity, as if it were a perfectly proper performance. As a preceding paragraph shows that Major Bickham has been fishing with the editor in question he doubtless got his news at first hands. May we respectfully inquire who is authorized to sell these tickets? Has the Republican party fallen so low as to tolerate open traffic of this kind? There was scandalous speculation in tickets at the Chicago Republican convention of 1884; but it was hought that it would not again be repeated. And here we see it in operation three weeks before the convention assembles.

An Outrage that Should Be Righted. Western Christian Advocate.
The New York Mail and Express characterizes the sale of the right to set up a saloon in the Cincinnati Centennial Exposition as an "outrage." It is an "outrage," and it is also an insult to the many thousands of people in the State who are expected to patronize the Exposition, where they and their children will be brought in contact with an evil which they have voted out of their midst. The vast majority of men, women and children who will attend the Exposition look upon the salcon with abhor-rence, and this feeling, which is justified by the evil fruits of the salcon, should be respected by the centennial commissioners. The permit granted should be revoked, and the temperance people who expect to attend the Exposition should write to the commissioners and demand that it be.

The Grand Army.

Brooklyn Eagle (Dem.) Hardly any trace of partisan politics remains to throw suspicion on the aims of the order or inject discord into its councils. Within its hospitable circle all alike, Democrate and Republicans, Labor men and Prohibitionists, are welcome. The motto of the army, "Fraternity, Loyalty, Charity," is being carried into logical and practical application. Consummation of the work decreed by the great emancipator, "to bind up the Nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow and orphans," is approaching. The Grand Army, in all its ramifications and manifold enterprises, is vindicating the judgement of those instrumental in its establishment and rising steadily in importance as a beneficent force in the social life of the United States.

MR. BLAINE'S LATEST LETTER

It Takes Him Clear Out of the Race, and His Name Will Not Be Presented.

Harrison's Strength Increased and H Chances for the Nomination Considered as Good as Those of Any Other Candidate.

THE BLAINE LETTER.

The Maine Man Is Out of the Race-Gree Improvement in Harrison's Chances. bectal to the Indianapolis Journal.

WASHINGTON, May 30. - This being a nations holiday in the District of Columbia, and th people nearly all idle, there was much comment on Mr. Blaine's second letter refusing to accept a presidential nomination. Every one, including the most enthusiastic friends of Mr. Blaine, does not hesitate to say that this last declaration is final and takes him clear beyond the pale of a presidential candidate, and that his name will not, under any circumstances, be presented in the convention at Chicago. Mr. Blaine's friends regret that continuous doubt as to his sincerity when he made his first statement from Florence made it necessary for him to reiterate his declination not to permit the use of his name in the convention. All now acknowledge his Florence letter was specific and insist that it should not have been doubted. He could not make it stronger than in the letter published this morning and maintained a respectful attitude toward his friends. Representatives Reed, Dingley, and others from Maine, who are most intimate friends of Mr. Blaine, as well as members from other States who are widely known as his prominent advocates, refuse to express any opinion further than that they believed that before this last letter was published he sincerely did not wish the nomination. No one predicts his nomina-

There is a variety of opinion as to who will inherit the strength of Mr. Blaine, now that he is out of the question. The well-known the cost of placing the finished article advocates of candidates in the field in the hand of the consumer are it would be very difficult to estigenerally adhere to their favorites, but many of them express a belief that a dark horse will come to the front. Depew. Harrison and Allison are mostly mentioned. A report came to Washington from New York, this afternoon, that a combination had been made and the ticket would be Harrison and Levi P. Morton; that Harrison was Blaine's choice, and that the New York delegation would go for him, providing Mr. Morton was given second place. There is no man in the United States to-night, who is more likely to lead the Republican ticket at the polls this fall than General Harrison. Mr. Blaine's declination, and his well-known friendship for Indiana's favorite, it is believed, will bring about the latter's nomination.

A Democrat Who Knows All About It. pecial to the Indianapolis Journat WASHINGTON, May 30.—The Washington Post will to-morrow publish the following: "The Post has the most respectable and the most reliable authority for the statement that two or more candidates for the nomination at the Chicago convention put their heads together, some time ago, and contrived a plan to get Mr. Blaine out of the race. The result of this contrivance was that when Mr. Blaine reached Paris he found several letters awaiting him, and not the least important were letters from these presidential con-spirators, as they have been termed, to the knowledge of the Post. The writer of one of these letters was Senator John Sherman. The name of the eminent gentleman who wrote the other will probably be known later, and be-fore it is much later. The two letters—it is not certain at present that there than two-dealt with the subject, and were similar in tone. remonstrated with Mr. Blaine for allowing a state of misunderstanding to exist concerning his candidacy for the presidency. Both expressed the utmost confidence that Mr. Blaine meant every syllable of what he said in his Florence letter, but pointed that the misinterpretation of that ter by some of Mr. Blaine's friends whose friendship was too ardent for political discretion, was embarrassing everybody, demoralizing the party organization and threatening the utter desintegration and hopeless defeat of the Republican party. Both letters apealed to Mr. Blaine to do something at once to relieve the party of this embarrassment. Both letters spoke of their friendship for Mr. Blaine in the past and an assurance of a continuance in the future. Both writers swore by all that was political that they would stick to Mr. Blaine while there was a button on his coat, and that never would have entered as candidates themselves if had not had the assurance of his Florence letter that he was entirely out of the race. Both urged Mr. Blaine to take such such action immediately as would make it impossible for a few injudicious friends here to put him in a false position before the country and deprive the party of that reasonable certainty of its ground which is necessary to success in "Knowing that these letters had met Mr. Blaine at Paris the Post informant had no difficulty in divining what has spurred Mr. Blaine to the writing of this last letter, especially when he read this significant part of it:

"On the other hand, friends equally devoted and interested have construed my (Florence) letter as it should be construed—to be an unconditional withholding of my name from the national convention. They have in consequence given their support to the eminent gentlemen who are candidates for the nomination—some of whom would not, I am sure, have consented to assume that position if I had desired to represent the party in the presidential contest of 1888."

"The Post's informant regards the act of the joint letter-writers as unfair and a disingenuous trick; and he blames Blaine for having written his letter at the prompting of his rivals without waiting to hear from his friends."

MR. J. S. CLARKSON. The Candidate Will be a Tariff Mac and

Friendly to Blaine. New York, May 30 .- Mr. J. S. Clarkson. Iowa member of the Republican national committee, and a member of the Iowa delegation this year, and who has supported Mr. Blaine in three national conventions, said to-day that the letter from Mr. Blaine published this morning simply emphasizes, for the benefit of the men who have become candidates on faith in the cander of his previous letter, that he meant what he said, and that he is out of the contest. So far as he can do so personally, he has prohibited his nomination at Chicago. "But," added Mr. Clarkson, "Mr. Blaine is still the party's leader. and the new situation can give no gratification to his enemies. The great mass of the party, and an overwhelming majority of the national convention are not only friendly to the policies and ideas in pub-lic affairs that he stands for, but are also friendly to him, and it is safe to say that the nominee will be one friendly to him and not his enemy a man who was loyal in 1884 and is sound on pro-tection—the great issue on which this campaign is to be fought." Mr. Clarkeon added that he thought that in the new situation the drift of the party will be toward Senator Allison, whose fitness and ability for the presidency, he said, are admitted, who is without the weakness of factional or personal enmities to alienate voters, who is strong in the Eeastern States because of his soundness on all industrial and financial questions and the protection issue, and also strong in the silver States of the West, because of the manner in which he saved silver as a part of the currency without offending the East or decreasing the volume of gold. "He has, to begin with," continued Mr. Clarkson, "the great advantage of his party's full strength, and has that everyday, even strength of the men who make the safest candidates and the best Presidents. We believe Allison to be the strongest candidate at the polls now. Yet we have the spirit of party interest controlling us, and if a stronger man can be found at Chicago, we shall be for him. The first thing didate we are going to elect the next President. OTHER POLITICAL NEWS.

Senator Gorman Thinks Thurman Will Be Nominated with Cleveland.

special to the Indianapolis Journal. WASHINGTON, May 30 .- I asked Senator Gor man, to-day, what there was in the Thurman boom. "There is a good deal in it," he replied. 'and, unless something unforescen should happen, Judge Thurman will be nominated for

Vice-president on the ticket with Mr. Cleve-

"Of course he will accept. Judge Thurman is a good party man, and will not refuse any duty that the convention may assign him. He may be reluctant about putting on the harness again, and he may prefer to live the life of peace and quies that he is enjoying now, but when he is called he will come, and he will make the strongest man we can place upon the ticket."

Minnesota Not for Gresham.

Princeton (Kinn.) Union. Minnesom is not for Gresham. He is a good man, and if nominated at Chicago would run well in this State, but he is not the first choice of the Republicans of Minnesota. Last week conventions were held in each of the five congressional districts, also the State convention for the election of four delegates at-large, and not a single resolution was passed in any one of the conventions indorsing Gresham; on the contrary, in the Fifth district convention a Gresham resolution was tabled by a decesive majority; and in the Fourth district convention a resolution instructing the delegates to vote for Blaine if his name was brought before the Chicago convention was adopted by a uninamous vote. The daily papers of St. Paul and Minneapolis and the wire-pullers of the State are for Gresham, but the people are loyal to the man from Maine and, notwithstanding his declination, believe that he will be nominated at Chicago next

THE MILLS EVIL

Monstrous Stopidity and Greenness of the Men Who Framed It.

When the details of the Mille bill first tecame known to the iron trade the objection was at once raised that instead of reducing the revenue the effect would be to increase the total duties collected. It may be conceded that it is a difficult matter to forecast the influence upon importations of a lowering of the tariff, since it depends upon a great variety of circumstances and demands a comprehensive knowledge of facts, which few experts, if any, possess. To judge of its effect it would be necessary to ascertain to what extent American manufacturers could reduce cost by demanding a lowering of wages, a reduction in freights, in supplies, in royalties on mineral property and on patents, in the interest rate on mortgages and bonds, etc. The shrinkage in profits would have to be borne, not only by the manufacturer and his workmen, but by middlemen and retailers also. How much in the aggregate such reductions in mate. Yet it would be one of the factors to determine the quantity imported, and hence the aggregate duty collected. It would aid to solve the question whether our own manufacturers could not alone hold their own, but whether they could control the natural increase in the consumption, which is so great a factor in our country. To make any estimate of duty collected under a new tariff, we would have to know the cost to the foreign producer, and the capacity of foreign works, as affecting the question whether the opening of our market wholly or partially would tax their resources so much as to cause an advance in prices partly or wholly compensating for lowering the tariff. It would be necessary to be able to determine whether the duty on one particular article happened to be relatively the lowest among a group forming the series from the raw material to the finished product, so that it would involve a study of one rate with reference to others. Importers will quickly find the article of least resistance and an unexpectedly large quantity of the particular goods may be brought in. Let it be supposed that the duty on pig and ore is comparatively high and that the same is true of steel rails or other finished forms, while blooms or billets have relatively the lowest duty. In such a case the imports on all the articles named might de-cline, in spite of lower duties, while the quanti-ties of blooms and billets might enormously in-

We have thrown out these suggestions merely to indicate some of the many influences which might affect the quantities of articles imported under new duties, aside from those fluctuations in the demand and in prices here and abroad, which affect the volume of trade from month to month. It will be readily appreciated that therefore an estimate of the amounts of duties flowing into the treasury is a very complex problem, in which there can be a wide diversity of opinion, except in those cases where an ar ticle is placed on the free list, or where a prohibitory rate is substituted for a lower duty. It was with considerable interest, therefore that we looked forward to the details upon which the framers of the Mills bill based their estimates of the reduction in the revenue growing out of the proposed rates of duty in the metal schedule. The total was made $8,808-746.95, against duties of $9.937,574.48 during the fiscal year 1887. We are amazed to find that former aggregate is a mounts as were imported in 1887 should form the basis of the new duties collected-in other words, the economists of the majority of the ways and means committee brush aside all considerations of the influence of a difference of duties in the volume of imports and estimate the revenue by multiplying the quantities imported in 1887 with the proposed rate of duty. To illustrate: In 1887 we imported 49,509 tons of steel rails at $17 a ton duty, making the revenue 8841,667.63. The new rate is $11, hence they estimate the amount of duty at 49,509x11, equal to $544,608,49. Or taking another case, that of cutlery. The imports in 1887 were $1-419.861.27, on which the duty levied was 50 per cent. or $709,930.64. The proposed rate is 35 per cent, hence, according to the committee the revenue under the proposed tariff will be 35 per cent. of $1,419,861.27 or $496,951.44, a reduction of over a '00,000. The same billiantly simple method is followed throughout. It is to men of such caliber that the future of enormous interests, the welfare of hundreds of thousands of men is intrusted-men who are either unable to understand, or too indolent to ascertain the fact that a sharp reduction in the duties on an article imported on a large scale at the higher rate of duty will certainly not yield a revenue reduced in the exact proportion of the lowering of the rate, but that the reduction of the revenue will be at a much lesser rate, and that it is within the bounds of possibilities that the aggregate amount of money collected at the custom-house may be actually greater than the sum obtained on a smaller quantity of simported goods at a higher rate of duty. Leaving out of consideration the reduction of the revenue growing out of placing tin plates on the free list, we feel confident, after an examination of the metal schedule, that the total duties which would flow into the treasury if the Mills bill were to be enacted in anything like its present form would be considerably greater than the average sum collected since the time when the present tariff act went into force.

Valuable American Wives.

Washington Star. Mr. Evans, the Liberal member just returned to the British Parliament from Southampton. had to conduct his canvass by proxy, being himself absent from England while it was in progress. His American wife appeared at the publie meetings in his stead, and carried him through in triumph. The American wives of the foreign politicians will be encouraged to take an interest in their husbands' political fortunes by the examples of Mme. Clemenceau in France, and of Lady Churchill and Mrs. Evans in England, and the belief will gradually be confirmed that no British candidate can be thoroughly equipped for battle without an Amer-

Philadelphia Times. Gen. Sheridan was accustomed to the most active life in the field and on the frontier until after the war, and the luxury of retirement to the command of a department at Chicago, and next to the command of the army at Washington, has rapidly told its story in the decay of the almost iron constitution of the hero of the Valley and of Appomattox. Gen. Taylor, who had braved the malaria and fevers of the South and of Mexico, and whose rugged physical evatem was regarded as proof against all exposure, speedily succumbed to the luxurylof Washington life, and Gen. Sheridan will simply repeat the history of President Taylor.

A Canine Arithmeticas.

Among the dogs to be entered at the Washington Kennel Club's annual bench show next week is Jack, a little black-and-tan dog owned by R. A. McMurry. The dog is an adept in figures and can do anything in arithmetic this side of fractions. "Jack," said his master, "get up in that chair and put your paws on the back and count three." The dog did as he was told, barking three little short barks. "How much are two and three!" was asked, and be repeated five barks in like manner. He performed several sums in subtraction, multiplication, and division, with never a single mistake A Show for Polly.

Philadelphia Times. A great parrot show is to be held at Turin this summer. Prizes are to be given for the polly who can use the most phrases, and for the oldest parrot. It is said that a polly who has seen eighty years will be present. It is related that Cuvier, the celebrated naturalist, has a perrot in his vestibule, who, upon seeing a stranger, would cry out: "What do you wen with my master?" And when a reply was given he would respond: "Den't talk too much."
